ASKS SCHOOL CHILDREN TO COLLECT CLOTHES FOR ARMENIAN KIDDIES

DR. E. C. BROOKS,
State Supt. of Schools.

School children of North Carolina—come to the rescue.

The 3,334 little Armenian children, dependent upon this state for food and clothing, may freeze to death next winter unless we send them our cast-off clothing now. Our people are throwing away their winter clothing now, and this very clothing can save many a child and adult from death through acute rheumatism and pneumonia.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, state superintendent of public instruction, asks that every school child in North Carolina gather up at least garments enough to keep one child or adult in the stricken Bible lands from freezing to death next winter. He is also asking that the children of each school be formed into a committee by their teachers to canvass their community for clothes.

These should be sent either to the local county chairman or to the Near East Relief Clothing Warehouse, Raleigh. The North Carolina committee is especially desirous of obtaining all of the coats, sweaters, dresses, trousers, blankets, heavy hosiery, wool gloves, mittens, boots, shopworn garments, shoes, sheets (for bandages), new cloth and garments possible.

This clothing will be distributed this summer and carefully husbanded by the Armenian children and refugees. Many of them died last winter from acute rheumatism and pneumonia simply from lack of clothing. Others just froze to death. Burlap rags and flour sacks might do them in summer but they do not keep out freezing temperature.

The Near East Relief cannot use laces, silks, veils, chiffons, evening clothes, satin slippers, muslin underwear, high-heeled shoes, straw or frame hats or silk stockings. In event any of these articles are donated it is suggested that a community sale or auction be held and the proceeds sent to Robert A. Brown, state treasurer, Raleigh.
